Four A. B. Freeman School of Business deans meet on campus

June 10, 2016 9:30 AM
Mark Miester mark@tulane.edu

From left: Former A.B. Freeman School of Business dean Angelo DeNisi, current dean Ira Solomon, and former deans James McFarland and Meyer Feldberg met at the business school campus on Wednesday (June 8). Together, the four administrators account for 35 years of Freeman School leadership. (Photo by Cheryl Gerber)

As Tulane University’s A. B. Freeman School of Business begins work on a major expansion and renovation, dean Ira Solomon hosted a visit from the person responsible for building Goldring/Woldenberg Hall I, former dean Meyer Feldberg. Feldberg served as dean from 1981 to 1986 and oversaw fundraising efforts to construct GW1, the first new academic building to be constructed on Tulane’s uptown campus in 18 years. Prior to the completion of GW1, the business school was housed in Norman Mayer Memorial Building. Feldberg left Tulane in 1986 to become president of the Illinois Institute of Technology, and he went on to serve as dean of Columbia Business School from 1989 to 2004. Today, Feldberg is a senior adviser to Morgan Stanley.